Personal Views: The County Executive must have integrity, common sense, and the ability to regain the publics' trust while restoring sound management principles. I'm not a career politician. This is my first entry into politics. I'm seeking the County Executive post to bring Pierce County a government we can trust and be proud of. At 50 years of age, I'm still young enough to care about tomorrow, but old enough to do something about it today. Born and raised in Washington, my family and I reside in Puyallup. My friends, neighbors and other working families share my concerns about the future of Pierce County. Pierce County could have a vibrant economy, with working families secure in their jobs. With the vast difference in the Pierce County Economy ranging from agriculture, aerospace, national/international trade and tourism, the County Executive needs to be more in touch with the citizens that drive all our industries. My promise to the voters is to use sound management principles to restore trust and confidence in County Government.
